FEATURES

- 14 Private Passion
by Rachel Brown
The sonatas by Johann Joachim Quantz were composed for Quantz's number-one fan: Frederick the Great, the King of Prussia—for whom Quantz suffered harrowing adventures and narrow escapes in his teaching efforts.
- 22 The French School: What Is so French about It?
by Rebecca. M. Valette
What is so French about the French Flute School? Just about everything! To a surprisingly deep and broad degree, how the French speak, act, sing, learn, and even behave are all crucial components of this style of flute playing.
- 38 A Different Path: An Interview with Jennifer Cluff
by Jerry Pritchard
Financial enrichment has always been less important to this flutist than has been the playing, teaching, and sharing of music. Modern technology has allowed her not only to overcome personal setbacks but also to help others do so—on a global stage.
